Sister of late Apple director talks about 'a huge hole in his family' in New York Times The daughter of Apple's late co-founder, Steve Jobs, has penned an op-ed for the New York Times, in which she details her struggle with "a huge hole in my family" following his death in October 2011, and how he left her in charge of the company he created. In part, she talks about her "sense of responsibility" after assuming the job: During those long days and sleepless nights, I learned how to be captain of my ship. I pulled my family together and set sail on a path that led us to our new home here
