VideoDownloader Pro Crack Full Version.Portland State University's president apologized Thursday after a survey of students showed that more than half of the school's international students said they considered a Portland area school a poor choice for their undergraduate education, according to the Portland Tribune. The survey, which polled nearly 300 students, found that 46 percent of international students said PSU was a poor choice. Another 41 percent said they felt the school's tuition was too high. Forty percent said they had family members who had considered attending the school. A statement released by Portland State University President Rahmat Shamsi said the school is "disappointed in the findings of this survey and we apologize to students who felt they had not found a quality university in Portland, Oregon." The statement also said the results didn't reflect the "care and dedication" of the school's faculty and staff. The statement said the results of the survey were difficult to interpret and the findings did not reflect the "true spirit of what this university is all about."
