To investigate the effect of oral contraceptive (OC) use on the pulsatile patterns of the gonadotropin-releasing hormone (GnRH) secretion in postmenopausal women, plasma luteinizing hormone (LH) and follicle-stimulating hormone (FSH) levels were evaluated on two occasions, either after withdrawal of OC or after a 4-week regimen of continuous OC use. Although the baseline values of the two hormones were similar in both conditions, the pulsatile patterns of LH and FSH were different in the two experimental situations. Continuous OC use resulted in a significant decrease of LH pulses and an increase of FSH pulses. The rise in frequency of LH pulses was related to the duration of OC use. This shift in GnRH pulse frequency was presumably caused by a continuous inhibition of the hypothalamic GnRH synthesis.Dr. Sanjay Gupta Sant Jai Das Gupta [Sanjay] (born in Cincinnati, Ohio, USA in 1959) is
